COLUMELA PDO Sherry Vinegars

Aged in Oak barrels following the “Criadera & Solera” method.

> Vinegars

Vinegar is the result of the acetic fermentation of a wine, in the case of Sherry Vinegar P.D.O., from wines of this area. It is the only place in the world where the "Criaderas y Solera" method is used, which together with its raw material distinguishes it from other vinegars.

The oak barrels used, were previously used to make Jerez wines, so the wood is impregnated with aromas. With a capacity of 516 liters, the American oak barrel allows the vinegar to breathe through its pores, facilitating its oxygenation. The "boot" that contains the oldest vinegar is called "SOLERA". Once Vinegar is extracted from this Solera, the same amount is replaced from the "first criadera", which in turn is filled with the "second criadera" and this the process continues until the last boot, which contains the youngest vinegar.

The flavors that are achieved with this unique method of preparation are highly recognized in the Gourmet Sector and in "everyday" cooking, giving our traditional dishes, like many others from all over the world, a special touch.
